Project Groups Created

Sept. 8, 08:18 ET

Dear Students,

I hope you had a nice Labor Day weekend. As you may have noticed, I have created your final project groups. All members of your group are in the same section, and you will be working in groups of four or five.

When making up the groups, my top priority is your topic interests; I managed to ensure that, for each member in the groups, the topic assigned is at least a 4 (with 1 as the best). I also take into account your preferences on generative AI and work time. Students with the same generative AI preferences are grouped together. When it comes to work time, I tried my best so that most groups will have at least one option (weekday days, weekday nights, and weekends) working for you. If you cannot find some time at which all of you are available, maybe it's a good idea to use group work time in lecture and discussion to meet and talk about your jobs.

For the group number, that on the tens digit represents that which section you are in, and that on the unit digit is arbitrary.

(I was manually typing all your names; sorry in advance if I had typos.)
See you in class!

Syllabus

- Attendance & Participation are mandatory, and communication is the key
- Emails:
  - “SOC 310” should be the beginning of your subject
  - address me as Haorui (or Mr. Peng if you want some formality), not “Dr.” or “Prof.”
- Office Hours:
  - regularly 1 p.m. - 3 p.m. on Fridays, LSA 4253; schedule in advance if possible

Brief Review

Bloome, Deirdre, Shauna Dyer, and Xiang Zhou. 2018. "Educational Inequality, Educational Expansion, and Intergenerational Income Persistence in the United States." American Sociological Review 83(6):1215-1253.

RQ Elements

- Population
e.g., U.S. citizens
- Factors (2 or more)
e.g., i). higher education expansion and ii). relative intergenerational mobility
- Relationship between Factors
association v.s. causation
- So, for example,
“How has U.S. higher education expansion impacted its relative intergenerational mobility (across cohorts)?”

Conceptualization

- To form a clear definition of abstract terms
- usually, it helps you to
  - make your terms understandable to most of your audiences
  - avoid different interpretations of the terms among different individuals
  - prepare for next steps, including operationalization

Conceptualization

w/ my example on mobility

- “How has U.S. higher education expansion impacted its relative intergenerational mobility (across cohorts)?”
- To define relative intergenerational mobility, Bloome, Dyer, and Zhou (2018:1215) said, “In closed societies, the children of high-income parents become high-income adults, while the children of low-income parents become low-income adults. In open societies, by contrast, adults’ income are less constrained by their parents’ incomes. ... intergenerational income persistence helps characterize the openness of a society ... .” They further paraphrased that lower mobility means that more people remaining on their parents’ rungs on the income ladder and fewer folks moving onto different rungs.

Conceptualization

w/ my example on mobility

- To define relative intergenerational mobility, Bloome, Dyer, and Zhou (2018:1215) said, “In closed societies, the children of high-income parents become high-income adults, while the children of low-income parents become low-income adults. - Another way is, according to Xie et al. (2022), to say, “Intergenerational social mobility refers to the extent to which the social status of individuals resembles that of their parents.”

Conceptualization

w/ my example on mobility

- To form a clear definition of abstract terms
- usually, it helps you to
  - make your terms understandable to most of your audiences
  - avoid different interpretations of the terms among different individuals
i.e., to specify that I'm not talking about, say, movements in cities
  - prepare for next steps, including operationalization
e.g., the authors will look at income

Conceptualization

v.s. operationalization, w/ my example on mobility

- Bloome et al. (2018) said,
“... intergenerational income persistence helps characterize the openness of a society ... .”

Conceptualization

v.s. operationalization, w/ my example on mobility

- Bloome et al. (2018) said,
“... intergenerational income persistence helps characterize the openness of a society by quantifying the association between parents' incomes and their children's incomes during adulthood.”

This article documents a rapid shift toward services (tertiarization) of the Chinese economy since 2005, as evidenced by the significant increase in both employment and value-added shares of the service sector. Notably, our analysis reveals that a variety of measures of productivity growth have been consistent since 2005.

Group Work

Assignment #1

- ~10 min, Group Contract
- By far, in your planning log, there should be summary notes for each article of your choice
- ~5 min, read each others' summaries
- the rest of time, consider:
  - more "sociological" way to state your RQ? e.g., terms you learned in your lit review
  - is the RQ too broad or too narrow?
  - how can your readings help you with introduction (context) and conceptualization?

Assignment #1

- due Sunday, September 13
- submit 3 things:
  - Group Contract (completion)
  - Planning Log (completion)
  - Essay (grading criteria provided)
